Unfair
commercial practices.

51B. (1) Unfair commercial practices shall be prohibited.

(2) A commercial practice shall be unfair if:

(a) it is contrary to the requirements of professional diligence, and

(b) it materially distorts or is likely to materially distort the economic behaviour with regard to the product, of the average consumer whom it reaches or to whom it is addressed, or of the average member of the group when a commercial practice is directed to a particular group of consumers;

Provided that, other than the advertising practice of making exaggerated statements or statements which are not meant to be taken literally, commercial practices which are likely to materially distort the economic behaviour only of a clearly identifiable group of consumers who are particularly vulnerable to the practice or the underlying product because of their mental or physical infirmity, age or credulity in a way which the trader could reasonably be expected to foresee, shall be assessed from the perspective of the average member of that group.

(3) In particular, a commercial practice shall be unfair if it is misleading in terms of articles 51C and 51D, or aggressive in terms of article 51E.

(4) Those commercial practices listed in the First Schedule shall in all circumstances be regarded as unfair.

Misleading actions.

51C. A commercial practice shall be regarded as misleading if:

(a) it contains false information; or

(b) in any way, including its overall presentation, deceives or is likely to deceive the average consumer, even if the information is factually correct, in relation to one or more of the following elements, and in either case causes or is likely to cause him to take a transactional decision that he would not have taken otherwise:

(i) the existence or nature of the product;

(ii) the main characteristics of the product, such as its availability, benefits, risks, execution, composition, accessories, after-sale customer assistance and complaint handling, method and date of manufacture or provision, delivery, fitness for purpose, usage, quantity, specification, geographical or commercial origin or the results to be expected from its use, or the results and material features of tests or checks carried out on the product;

(iii) the extent of the trader's commitments, the motives for the commercial practice and the nature of the sales process, any statement or symbol in relation to direct or indirect sponsorship or approval of the trader or the product;

(iv) the price or the manner in which the price is calculated, or the existence of a specific price advantage;

(v) the need for a service, part, replacement or repair;

(vi) the nature, attributes and rights of the trader or his agent, such as his identity and assets, his qualifications, status, approval, affiliation or connection and ownership of industrial, commercial or intellectual property rights or his awards and distinctions;

(vii) the consumer's rights, including the right to repair, replacement or reimbursement as provided in Part IX of the Act, or the risks he may face; or

(c) in its factual context, taking account of all its features and circumstances, it causes or is likely to cause the average consumer to take a transactional decision that he would not have taken otherwise, and it involves:

(i) any marketing of a product, including comparative advertising, which creates confusion with any products, trade marks, trade names or other distinguishing marks of a competitor; or

(ii) non-compliance by the trader with commitments contained in codes of conduct by which the trader has undertaken to be bound, where

(a) the commitment is not aspirational but is firm and is capable of being verified, and

(b) the trader indicates in a commercial practice that he is bound by the code.

Misleading omissions.

51D. (1) A commercial practice shall be regarded as misleading if:

(a) in its factual context, taking account of all its features and circumstances and the limitations of the communication medium, it omits material information that the average consumer needs, according to the context, to take an informed transactional decision and thereby causes or is likely to cause the average consumer to take a transactional decision that he would not have taken otherwise;

or

(b) taking account of the matters described in paragraph (a), the trader hides, or provides in an unclear, unintelligible, ambiguous or untimely manner, such material information as referred to in that paragraph, or fails to identify the commercial intent of the commercial practice if not already apparent from the context, and where, in either case, this causes or is likely to cause the average consumer to take a transactional decision that he would not have taken otherwise.

(2) Where the medium used to communicate the commercial practice imposes limitations of space or time, these limitations and any measures taken by the trader to make the information available to consumers by other means shall be taken into account in deciding whether information has been omitted.

(3) In the case of an invitation to purchase, the following information shall be regarded as material, if not apparent from the context:

(a) the main characteristics of the product, to an extent appropriate to the medium and the product;

(b) the geographical address and the identity of the trader, such as his trading name and, where applicable, the geographical address and the identity of the trader on whose behalf he is acting;

(c) the price inclusive of taxes, or where the nature of the product means that the price cannot reasonably be calculated in advance, the manner in which the price is calculated, as well as, where appropriate, all additional freight, delivery or postal charges or, where these charges cannot reasonably be calculated in advance, the fact that such additional charges may be payable;

(d) the arrangements for payment, delivery, performance and the complaint handling policy, if they depart from the requirements of professional diligence;

(e) for products and transactions involving a right of withdrawal or cancellation, the existence of such a right.

(4) Information requirements established by law in relation to commercial communications including advertising or marketing shall be regarded as material.

Aggressive commercial practices.

51E. (1) A commercial practice shall be regarded as aggressive if, in its factual context, taking account of all its features and circumstances, by harassment, coercion, including the use of physical force, or undue influence, it significantly impairs or is likely to significantly impair the average consumer's freedom of choice or conduct with regard to the product and thereby causes him or is likely to cause him to take a transactional decision that he would not have taken otherwise.

(2) In determining whether a commercial practice uses harassment, coercion, including the use of physical force, or undue influence, account shall be taken of:

(a) its timing, location, nature or persistence;

(b) the use of threatening or abusive language or behaviour;

(c) the exploitation by the trader of any specific misfortune or circumstance of such gravity as to impair the consumer's judgement, of which the trader is aware, to influence the consumer's decision with regard to the product;

(d) any onerous or disproportionate non-contractual barriers imposed by the trader where a consumer wishes to exercise rights under the contract, including rights to terminate a contract or to switch to another product or another trader;

(e) any threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken.

Infringements.

51F. A person who engages in an unfair commercial practice in terms of articles 51B, 51C, 51D and 51E, shall be guilty of an infringement against this Act.

Control by code owners.

51G. (1) The provisions of this Title shall not preclude the control by code owners of unfair commercial practices through codes of conduct.

(2) Recourse to code owners for the purpose of ensuring compliance with such codes of conduct shall not prejudice any other form of redress available under this Act or any other law.

Exclusion. 51H. The provisions of this Title shall not apply to any other law relating to the certification and indication of the standard of fineness of articles of precious metal.
